The Lounger, as well as almost everyone else, concedes the fact that but little has been said concerning the success of Mr. Prescott of the English Department. Mr. Prescott should be given a tryout on a small scale in order to make sure that he is the right man for the job. But now that the question is on the table, it seems advisable to try him out. The Lounger says, "alright," before it is too late. Now is the time to find out Mr. Prescott's abilities. If he can't do the work, he can't do it. If he can do it, he is the right man for the job. But in any case, the question of the English Department should be discussed at the earliest possible moment.

For the sake of the students, for the sake of the institution, and for the sake of the Lounger, Mr. Prescott should be given a tryout on a small scale. But if he fails, then it is better to know it early, so that the institution can take steps to correct the situation.

The Lounger would like to see the English Department reorganized. The Lounger feels that there are better ways of teaching English, and that the present system is outdated. The Lounger would like to see a new system of teaching English, one that is more modern and up-to-date.
