A TECHNOLOGY RING

A attempt to add to the all too few credits which are here at the Institute is now underway. It is proposed to inaugurate a ring of some distinctive design which would be restricted to those who are members of the Sigma Xi fraternity.

The identification of Technology graduates will be especially simple. Graduating college members are the rings with the world of West Point and another. The materials used in the Technology ring will be restricted to four colors.

The existence of such an emblem as a Tech ring for every man who wears it, to be given with cordially as a "beast Tech man" must be someone must be a source of pleasure for many a young engineer. Later on to have his success and his Alum Master acknowledged simultaneously should bring him even greater satisfaction.

But to have a Technology ring is not completing its greatest possibilities for seed, several essential features must be added. At least every Senior must get a ring this year, and every man must have his or her two rings by December next year and unless their examples are copied by the lower classes in succession, the idea will have been better unsecured. Among the circumstances under which the ring must be in existence is the most favorable and the ring must be used in establishing, recognizing, and propagating this as a tradition which can become one of the most important of recent innovations at the Institute.
