The Tech - January 2, 1922

This Issue

The day when the direction of the affairs of Technology will concern most the hands of one man at last is at hand. The accession to the presidency of the Evergreen Westmorehouse is an event of no small importance in the history of the Institute. Though constantly undergoing a process of evolution, the educational system of the country has been confronted with extraordinary conditions during the years following the war, which make the need for leadership all the more pressing.

Contradicted with the problem of handling greatly increased student bodies, the board of trustees, in common with the faculty of the college, are finding the need of a president. This is a direct result of the multiplicity of the world’s problems. Not only are the minds of men and women taken up with the immediate problems of the day, but they are brought face to face with the world of the future. The needs and the desires of the students must be met, but the needs and the desires of the men and women who will be in charge of the school must also be taken into consideration.

Contemporary Comment

IDEALISM IN EDUCATION

(From the Westfield Daily)

Every measure that is taken in the direction of the newspaper and periodicals of the day must be met by a vast awareness of the need of the change in education. The demands of the day are not limited to the printing press alone. The educational system must be brought into line with the times. The men and women who are engaged in the teaching profession must be prepared to meet the needs of the day.

The process of evolution is not only a change in the educational system, but also in the social system. The men and women who are engaged in the teaching profession must be prepared to meet the needs of the day.

In Chang of This Issue

The day when the direction of the affairs of Technology will concern most the hands of one man at last is at hand. The accession to the presidency of the Evergreen Westmorehouse is an event of no small importance in the history of the Institute. Though constantly undergoing a process of evolution, the educational system of the country has been confronted with extraordinary conditions during the years following the war, which make the need for leadership all the more pressing.

Contradicted with the problem of handling greatly increased student bodies, the board of trustees, in common with the faculty of the college, are finding the need of a president. This is a direct result of the multiplicity of the world’s problems. Not only are the minds of men and women taken up with the immediate problems of the day, but they are brought face to face with the world of the future. The needs and the desires of the students must be met, but the needs and the desires of the men and women who will be in charge of the school must also be taken into consideration.

Contemporary Comment

IDEALISM IN EDUCATION

(From the Westfield Daily)

Every measure that is taken in the direction of the newspaper and periodicals of the day must be met by a vast awareness of the need of the change in education. The demands of the day are not limited to the printing press alone. The educational system must be brought into line with the times. The men and women who are engaged in the teaching profession must be prepared to meet the needs of the day.

The process of evolution is not only a change in the educational system, but also in the social system. The men and women who are engaged in the teaching profession must be prepared to meet the needs of the day.

In Chang of This Issue

The day when the direction of the affairs of Technology will concern most the hands of one man at last is at hand. The accession to the presidency of the Evergreen Westmorehouse is an event of no small importance in the history of the Institute. Though constantly undergoing a process of evolution, the educational system of the country has been confronted with extraordinary conditions during the years following the war, which make the need for leadership all the more pressing.

Contradicted with the problem of handling greatly increased student bodies, the board of trustees, in common with the faculty of the college, are finding the need of a president. This is a direct result of the multiplicity of the world’s problems. Not only are the minds of men and women taken up with the immediate problems of the day, but they are brought face to face with the world of the future. The needs and the desires of the students must be met, but the needs and the desires of the men and women who will be in charge of the school must also be taken into consideration.

Contemporary Comment

IDEALISM IN EDUCATION

(From the Westfield Daily)

Every measure that is taken in the direction of the newspaper and periodicals of the day must be met by a vast awareness of the need of the change in education. The demands of the day are not limited to the printing press alone. The educational system must be brought into line with the times. The men and women who are engaged in the teaching profession must be prepared to meet the needs of the day.

The process of evolution is not only a change in the educational system, but also in the social system. The men and women who are engaged in the teaching profession must be prepared to meet the needs of the day.

In Chang of This Issue

The day when the direction of the affairs of Technology will concern most the hands of one man at last is at hand. The accession to the presidency of the Evergreen Westmorehouse is an event of no small importance in the history of the Institute. Though constantly undergoing a process of evolution, the educational system of the country has been confronted with extraordinary conditions during the years following the war, which make the need for leadership all the more pressing.

Contradicted with the problem of handling greatly increased student bodies, the board of trustees, in common with the faculty of the college, are finding the need of a president. This is a direct result of the multiplicity of the world’s problems. Not only are the minds of men and women taken up with the immediate problems of the day, but they are brought face to face with the world of the future. The needs and the desires of the students must be met, but the needs and the desires of the men and women who will be in charge of the school must also be taken into consideration.

Contemporary Comment

IDEALISM IN EDUCATION

(From the Westfield Daily)

Every measure that is taken in the direction of the newspaper and periodicals of the day must be met by a vast awareness of the need of the change in education. The demands of the day are not limited to the printing press alone. The educational system must be brought into line with the times. The men and women who are engaged in the teaching profession must be prepared to meet the needs of the day.

The process of evolution is not only a change in the educational system, but also in the social system. The men and women who are engaged in the teaching profession must be prepared to meet the needs of the day.