From Galliardi to the Stein Song

We who cherish our Stein Song as a symbol of the great lightheartedness and good fellowship which is the essence of the Boston College atmosphere in the course of university life and which is so often the source of inspiration to the student body. In the days before the war, when the Stein Song was written, there was a feeling of optimism and confidence that the future would be brighter than the past. The Stein Song expressed this belief in a way that was both entertaining and inspiring.

The Stein Song was written by the late William F. Galliardi, a student at Boston College, and it was first performed at a fraternity party in the early 1920s. Since then, it has become a tradition at Boston College and is performed at various events throughout the year.

The Stein Song is a popular and well-known song at Boston College, and it is often performed at events such as football games, basketball games, and other university events. It is a symbol of the school spirit and the sense of community that is so important to the student body.

The Stein Song is also a source of pride for Boston College students, and it is often chanted by the student body during events such as football games and basketball games. It is a song that unites the students of Boston College and is a symbol of the school's rich history and traditions.

The Stein Song is a testament to the enduring spirit of Boston College and the love of its students for their university. It is a song that is loved and cherished by all who have had the privilege of being a part of the Boston College community.

This is why the Stein Song is so beloved at Boston College. It is a symbol of the school's spirit and the love of its students for their university. It is a song that is loved and cherished by all who have had the privilege of being a part of the Boston College community.
