CLEAN POLITICAL RISKS WITH JUNIORS

FAILURES and the cry of dirty politics will be the outcome of the following passage: "The adoption of the electoral college if only a small proportion of the class takes an active interest in the voting. A majority of the class must express a definite opinion or the whole class will be deprived of meaning and of co-operative use."

We are not only selecting an election but regarding it by many with a suspicion of tainted politics. Whether such an attitude be justified or not in nature those which have been created by the original Senior election it can be extinguished by a very heavy vote, both in the referendum tomorrow and the new elections, if the latter should be decided on favorably.

The Juniors have the integrity of Technology's democratic government in their hands. Its entire future, as well as the possibilities of further and more practical influence, of obtaining student opinion, depend on the number of 1924 men who elect their own future, or by their failure to regard their privilege of voting as a duty, as contrasted with a mere right. The duty not only to themselves, but to the honor of Technology.

DEFENDING A CHALLENGED PRINCIPLE

THOSE of the Faculty who are of Professor Jackson's frame of mind should get the idea out of their heads that the only function of activities is to put additional work on a man. Moreover, all activities and extra-curricular studies are done with the regular curriculum of studies. They are supplementary to it. More often than not Professor Jackson distinguishes the question of time devoted to studying. Granted that the work assigned should be done, does it follow that a student neglecting the cigs of the campus companion or thinking by doing it in a minimum of time, provided, of course, of quality, the work assigned? We feel that, instead of the scientific method of thinking learned only through four years of college, the character of the student is what makes the character of the institution.

Professor Jackson seems to leave out the human side of the issue completely when he states that activities are not as those engaged in deep scientific research. But dynamics and electronics are not the only subjects which are being studied by the regular curriculum of studies. They are supplementals, to it.

We must study men as well. Not only the best, but the only method by-.
