December T.E.N. has two features

Account of Aldred Lectures to appear in next week's publication

The December issue of the Tech Engineering News appears to-morrow. Two features have been introduced into this issue which is the largest ever published. These two features include a two-page picture section. A new history section has been added to the engineering section and is headed "A New History of Engineering," the interest to the undergraduates is in accordance with the Aldred Lectures. This is the first time that the lectures will be published for the entire student body; and it is expected that the Aldred Lectures will be enthusiastically received by the students and a devoted readers at the first two lectures. There is an index to the lectures and an abbreviation of the last lecture. It is the intention of the editorial board of the Engineering News to print the lectures of the preceding month and the abbreviation of the issue to spark the interest of the students in the engineering world. Among the doctor articles one of the best is a review of the imported automobile show recently held in New York. C. A. Clavane '19 describes the various motors recently held at New York. C. A. view of the Imported Automobile Show.
