To be addressed to the ladies is the usual, the privileged function of this editorial. It is to give a brief expression of opinion of the fair sex in the hope of eliciting the possible scintillating events of this week. Your presence in the Technology community is the crowning, climactic affair of the season. If the Style Department has done its best to deter your interest in the college and its surroundings, and the jollity you have brought will remain to cheer awhen the dull monotony of pedagogic routine has again engulfed us.

So to you we salve this editorial cup of welcome, this cup of love and good cheer, hoping most sincerely that our brief digression from pursuit of the technical has resulted in real enjoyment and entertainment for you. And too that you have had adventures of the heart and romances of reality of being remembered long after this Junior Week has been forgotten.

THE ANNAPOLIS TRIP

This week the first and second Varsity crews are training on the Severn in preparation for the Navy race. This is an entirely new departure in the way of training for Institute sports. Under the leadership of Coach "Bill" Harline the eights are making a real bid to place themselves in the first rank of college crews. While Technology has always led to "sport for sport's sake," the powers that be are beginning to realize that a strong, winning team is not necessarily a commercial one. Sending the crews away for a training trip is a new departure— but it does not have to be one only.

In some colleges, athletics occupy far too prominence a position. Except that the players receive no direct compensation, they are treated as if they were the chief ornament of the college. This is not the case with Institute sports. They are there to make money as well as to raise the prestige of the college. At the Institute the reverse is true. Athletics are not self-supporting, and it is extremely inconsistent for any papers to say they are.

This Young Men's Topcoats are running on a commercial basis. They are there to make money as well as to raise the prestige of the college. There is no question of the players receiving any direct compensation. Some of the colleges have admitted that they are not worthy of the name. But surely, dear lady, you should tell Phosphorus if only out of kindness to these under-educated ruffians. They have embraced the Goddess of Spring, and in its place Technology is forgotten, and in its place Phosphorus that you don't want to make him so. The Lounger knows this, and makes things worse. It's really serious.

COURTESY is of inestimable value in the pursuit of success. The natural, informal variety is of course preferable to the cultivated, stilted type, put strong enough to match the modern era. A century of service.
