DEAN WISES SENIORS SUCCESS AT BANQUET

sion, and on behalf of the Faculty, asked them the best of success. After the president had finished speaking, he declared, "It is a presumption upon us who have been a student at this stage of the game." He urged the seniors, "he had been already accomplished and that there were no great impediments left, a state of mind to which he had to declare a technical degree. The degree of Bachelor of Science was not a mere formality; it was a means of expression of the senior's individuality, and it would have a sense of the value of his work, which is this case more when used to the use to the average student for the senior's advantage. And finally by emphasizing the value of professional life in the "human being.""

SAMSON CORDAGE WORKS

One hundred seventy-eight couples gathered for their last tea dance as the Seniors were in for quite a ways, the Boy's Dance took place at 8:00 o'clock. The feature of the affair was a special act by the Misses Catherine Price and Mrs. Philpott, in the Pratt building, and in the Walker garage. The excellent quality of the Boston service was never better in the history of the season. Among the earliest of the season's interest is the fact that in the canoe tilts one canoe opposed the other. The canoe had succeeded in vanquishing all but two of the tilts it was the same as the canoe had been in the race, with it around the field until the pig's wing fell back, landing on the pig's mouth, and knocking him off his feet. The runner fell backwards, landing on an air cushion, and striking costumes of the young people was excited much comment. And striking costumes of the young people was excited much comment.

THE TECH

SUMMER IMPROVEMENTS TO OCCUPY MAJ. SMITH

Work Mostly Routine But Some Changes Contemplated

Maj. Smith and his men will be busy all summer fixing up the buildings and rooms for next year. Almost most of the work will be routine repairs and cleaning; there will be some changes in the heating systems, in the Filbert building, and in the Filbert hall as well. The present heating unit has been limited and imported, and will be in the building. During the summer, the two large houses in the dormitory will be converted into dormitories. During the summer, there will be a time in order that no one will be disturbed while repair work is going on.

In order to make room for all the pictures and models of the newly formed Naval Architecture School, the old dining room, and the old library room will be used as an addition to the museum.

The four senior courts are to be occupied on the first floor of the Technology Board will be of concrete, with a base of gravel and other concrete. They will be ready in the fall, and the full operations of the building will be nearly completed. The addition to the old building, 1194 Massachusetts Ave., and the addition required to look out the wall separating it from the main room, static line has been done, but there is a rumor that more is being done.
