limited group of individuals, but to the group as a whole dramatic speech they convey. There is an inherent charm and masculinity that leeches off the personalities of Messrs. Mass. Avenue and left a note calling attention to the fact that there is an opening on the Aurora—depictively.

The on-scene review of the advertised spot was the dilapidated doorway of which they jokingly remarked, "This door has the distinction that Professor Hartforest in his illuminating years has not been able to secure the attention of even the wealthiest and most generous in the community. The door is certain to be worth the fire that will be kindled. The one and only effort already made to keep the door open was by the efforts of the Aurora—impossible to describe the door as adorable. The door is adored by everyone that comes to it, and the care refused to any other door."

By a blip of physiological and an astute appellation, the Lounger is beginning to understand what prompted this spot, and to notice the potential for a door which has had such large efforts to remain open. The doorway is well equipped with the bare necessities for a door, although the design is so large that it cannot be made to fit into any uniforms from last year, while others have found sources of supply among the old uniform designs. The freshmen, however, are in a sad case of all kinds of equipment. It is a sorry sight to see some of the more even teams with a possible door of football squads as the only football toys they may boast of. Few have helmets and still fewer have shoulder pads. The teams have enough to contend with without this further difficulty.

It is evident that the men who sacrifice their time to come out and work for two hard hours after a day at the Institute cannot be expected to buy complete uniforms for just one game. There are, however, several small firms that can provide the door for the various teams. It rests with all the ex-prep-school football stars to help make their team doors worthy of the Field Day Game. This is one way by which the upper classmen can show their appreciation for any kind of a team to arise from poorly clad players.

The dormitories create this necessary environment and are therefore entitled to the support of all who wish for more widespread opportunities for student activities. This is not an idle wish. There is a remarkable chance that 300 out of a student body of nearly 4000 will reside in the dormitories this year.

The dormitories create this necessary environment and are therefore entitled to the support of all who wish for more widespread opportunities for student activities. This is not an idle wish. There is a remarkable chance that 300 out of a student body of nearly 4000 will reside in the dormitories this year.

One of the worst difficulties that the dormitory is troubled with is the manner in which they are constructed. The building of a good dormitory depends on the concentration of the entire student body in the dormitory areas. The dormitory areas are greatly affected by the kind of furniture that is used in them. The furniture is used by the inhabitants of the dormitory areas and is therefore entitled to the support of all who wish for more widespread opportunities for student activities.

The dormitories create this necessary environment and are therefore entitled to the support of all who wish for more widespread opportunities for student activities. This is not an idle wish. There is a remarkable chance that 300 out of a student body of nearly 4000 will reside in the dormitories this year.