"Engineering Record" Claims Students Should Keep Text Books

Report of an Editorial Published in The Engineering Record

It is surprising to find how contrary is the opinion of some students to enthusiasm of other students when it comes time to dispose of the books which are used. During the last decade, the use of materials and textbooks as a whole has increased so that there were 29 and 118 students respecting two books, respectively, with 26 copies of the textbooks that have been disposed of by them during the past year. The total number of students in the 1925 Spring Tour, 128, was only 1 unit in favor of the change.

The Faculty, for the most part, would say nothing concerning the merits of the case, but did let it be understood that they were favoring the change. At the Faculty meeting, the committee investigating the matter submitted a report which gave some credit to the resistance to the change but not enough to hinder the process.
