Institute Professor Near Death in Wreck
Professor P. R. Brown of the Department of Agriculture barely escaped death in a tragic accident Monday morning when the tug Delaney, in which he was riding, struck the east side of the railroad bridge over the Boston and Albany Railroad near the Union Iron Works in East Boston. The Delaney was returning from the Charlestown Basin and, according to Professor Brown, was proceeding very slowly. The tug was hit by the railroad bridge just at the moment when the教授 Brown was making his way to the door of the tug. The professor was completely dazed, and the entire story of the accident was clearly related by Professor Brown when he regained consciousness, which was following behind a bit. After the doctor went through the story, the tug goes on its way as it went through.

Professor Rogers to Talk on Plays at Frosch Lecture
Recreational Facilities Which Technology Student Has, To Be Considered

"WILL NOT BE SERMON"

Professor R. E. Rogers of the Department of English will deliver his freshmen lecture tomorrow evening in roon 1050E at 11:00 o'clock. His talk will deal with the recreations of the students, which the Technology students have so proudly cultivated. In his discussion Professor Rogers will try to give a better understanding of the advanced students who are being trained in the various departments of the Institute, and he will try to show that the idea of giving freshmen to select their courses of study is of great value.

The lecture will be held in the Lecture Hall of the Institute, and is open to all members of the Institute.
