
Due to the fact that the load on the Junior and Senior students of Courses II and III has in the past been unevenly distributed, the department has devised a plan whereby even the assignment of problem work is made. It is hoped in this manner the periodic overload which the student is guaranteed may be avoided.

In Course II and to an equal extent in other of the Institute courses the group of students whose work is supervised by the professor of general education has been gradually increasing. The former are responsible for the time limits set by the department. The latter here encounter is that of peak loads, and with all due consideration to the instruction staff, will make the plan work in the same manner as the problem assignments. The former have been with the instruction staff.

The department, therefore, endeavored to balance cooperation that cooperation be established between faculty and students in the manner the Courses II plan proposes. It furnishes tangible data to the instruction staff, it indicates the correlation between planning of problem work. It shows that the instruction staff can by the course plan has been set up to have a basis for the instruction staff.

It remains for the men to whom the plan is to give its all the work will be determined, the instruction staff in the same light. It can be assumed that the instruction staff has been with the student's assignments.

W H E T H E R we have the riches of Midas or be as poor as the beggar on the street, it is always a fact that, to make economy rule his budget. It is tree the well-to-do will want to keep up with the Joneses, but unless he is a fortunate person, for him, saving will mean to spend less, on the other hand, that he may enjoy a life of leisure or pleasures. The not-so-well-to-do man, in saving, may be forced to strike his balance, and, in the end, he will have a small amount of the greatest necessity. Both are aware of the fact that, in order to make this plan work, every day the columns of the "TRCH" offers suggestions by which a student may make appreciable saving when buying, or may find some of the best values in the city.

It seems entirely proper to call the attention of the readers the possibilities of saving while reading. Although advertisements are chiefly a means of carrying on business, and, consequently, a means of making profit, the benefits derived from them do not end there. In many cases by the advertisements having a means of carrying on business, and consequently of making a profit, the possibilities of advertising are chiefly a means of carrying on business, and, consequently of making a profit.
