FACT AND FABLE IN COLLEGE LIFE

WHAT do most people think of college life? What impression does the course of study at our colleges and universities give? To the mind of a man who has neither been to college nor sent any of his children, who merely sees the public appearances of our college men, the most that he can do is to form an estimate of college life from the way the students look in public. He may come to the conclusion that college men are all alike, are always in a hurry, and that in their looks and in their dress they are not superior to the young men of any other branch of education. He will probably think that they are not superior to the young men of any other branch of education.

In spite of the fact that there has been much sarcastic comment and seemingly ventive of spigifal feeling lound of advances in the annual Techno-Technique football game, it is all in a spirit of friendly rivalry and when the eventful game is over, everything but the fund is bad in the preparation will have been forgotten.

COLLEGE PREPARATION

As the courses of study improve in content and method, the function of the colleges and universities will be performed more efficiently, and the demand for college education will be increased. The students will be more interested in the work of the colleges and universities, and a greater number of them will be prepared to enter the professions and other fields of life. The course of study will be more varied, and the students will have more opportunity to specialize in the subjects in which they are most interested.

HISTORY OF THE GREAT GAME

How THE TECH Has Humbled Snique Down Through the Centuries

On a bright, sunny day last Thursday morning, the editor of THE TECH was sitting on the steps of Yale University, with a large audience of students gathered around him. The editor was speaking on the history of the great game, and the audience was attentive. The editor then referred to the game of football, and the audience was interested. The OPEN FORUM

To the Editor of the Tech:

While some of your colleagues are still in the midst of their examinations, the cartoon accompanying the letter of the editor is an excellent illustration of the value of the ideals referred to in the letter. It is a picture of the student's life as it is, and it shows that the ideals referred to in the letter are not merely theoretical, but are the ideals of the students themselves.

The As We Like It

Amusingly subtle, brittle, but decent, and very cleverly noted is "The Great Gatsby," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Elsie Ferguson as the Grand Duchess

The frequent "confessions" of the Crabbe, Aronched, lady attendant to the Grand Duchess, to the happenings of his past life, and much to the plentiful supply of humor in the play.

Play Directory

You can find the Play Directory for the Techno-Technique football game. It includes listings for the plays and performances. The directory is available for anyone interested in attending the events.
