Undergraduate Discusses Ism and the College Man

By L. McManus '27

Monday, Dec. 14, 1925

For some unknown reason, many students have the notion that the Ism is a less important factor in a college education than it actually is. The first time I heard the s statement I thought it quite ridiculous. But after a little reflection I realized there was some truth in it.

When a student enters a college, he is not just a student an individual. He is a member of some group or another. And undergraduates of a certain Ism in a college, it is possible to unify the other students in a certain group. This is done by the influence of the group on the student, and by the student's influence on the group.

I think every college student should be an Ism. And every Ism student should be in a college. This is because the Ism is a vital part of a college education. And the college education is a vital part of the Ism education.

The Ism is a way of life. And the college is a place where one can live that way of life. The Ism is a way of thinking. And the college is a place where one can think that way. The Ism is a way of doing. And the college is a place where one can do that way. The Ism is a way of feeling. And the college is a place where one can feel that way.

The Ism is a way of being. And the college is a place where one can be that way. The Ism is a way of loving. And the college is a place where one can love that way. The Ism is a way of hating. And the college is a place where one can hate that way. The Ism is a way of caring. And the college is a place where one can care that way. The Ism is a way of being. And the college is a place where one can be that way.

The Ism is a way of being. And the college is a place where one can be that way. The Ism is a way of being. And the college is a place where one can be that way.

The Ism is a way of being. And the college is a place where one can be that way. The Ism is a way of being. And the college is a place where one can be that way.