New Egg Substitute For Cooking Use Has Been Developed By Prof. Bunke

Technology Review Announces Result of Research in "Egg Substitution"

Professor Bunke's study of the new egg protein indicates, it was pointed out, that the substitute protein, of the type proposed by Prof. Bunke, is of the nature of a foodstuff and is not to be considered as an artificial food product. It has been found that the protein content of the new foodstuff is very high and that it contains all the essential vitamins and minerals that are necessary for good health. The new foodstuff is also said to be a valuable source of protein for those who are on a special diet such as those suffering from diabetes.

The new egg substitute, called "Egg Substitution For Cooking Use," was developed by Prof. Bunke, who has been working on this project for several years. The substitute egg protein is made from a combination of vegetable and fruit proteins, which are said to be rich in vitamins and minerals. The protein content of the substitute egg is said to be higher than that of the normal egg.

The substitute egg protein is said to be a good addition to the diet of people who are on a special diet, such as those suffering from diabetes. It is also said to be a good source of protein for those who are on a vegetarian diet.
