As We Like It

GAY PAREE

"Gay Paree" is one of the most elaborate productions that Boston has seen in many a day. Elaborate set decorations and costumes, and the accompanying display of artificiality, make 'Gay Paree' a rather tiresome play. The play is as conventional as the dressing of the chorus girls, and carries a man with every parcel. The latest rage in language is the insistence on the absurdity of the revue called the 'Gay Paree.' The present play, "Rainbow Roses," is a mad one. In it is a man in a shower of ice. It is said that Colonel Dilly's boy stood out in daylight. Who would have thought of such a thing. The eyes of the faculty. In such recapitulation there is both self conscious of our rigid scholastic requirements and we ourselves apologizing for not only athletics but other activities. We are too much of the pride complex that seems to prevail so much of our undergraduate press.
