*Matches won, 1; Matches lost, 7.

In the first match of the season, the Boston University swimmers did an easy win over the Engineers for a large score. The second meet, with Harvard, proved a heart-breaking defeat for the Engineers. When, with victory within their grasp, the relay team lost out in the final dash to the finish.

Williams, the next opponent of the Cambridge team, gathered the majority of the points to secure a remarkable victory. The first meet of the year thus marked the beginning of three events for the championship team. Graduation will claim but few regulars from the squad and an almost complete nucleus for a future championship team will be maintained. With one more year of steady practice, Harvard expects to be a truly representative organization.

The weight throwers are not behind in the 175-pound class, and Captain Sulzberger in the 145-pound division, the latter being a very hard fought match that was not decided until the final rush and relay was over. The defeat in the Providence meet at the hands of Brown was the final dash of the season.

Engineers Start Season With Victory

To all appearances the present tank season from the standpoint of Harvard is not a great success. The men have been working faithfully, however, and with no outside help, all but three freshmen are firmly set on a high mark toward a successful championship team. Graduation will claim but few regulars from the squad and an almost complete nucleus for a future championship team will be maintained. With one more year of steady practice, Harvard expects to be a truly representative organization.

The Harvard tank team was busy all the fall, and the present men show some miraculous material can be unearthed or developed by the present coaching staff. The team should be in condition to take all of its old marks for a full season. There is no question but what the team will assume an infinite amount of energy as they have no one capable of placing them in competition in this event. Unlike some new jumpers, who have not been taught to jump properly, the Harvard team will be well trained and will make a good showing.

The swimmers will have a good showing in the long-distance races, next week elimination matches will be started. The men will have to show their efficiency when they take the honors in getting out of doors. One feature of the Harvard team this season will be the ability to compete. This accounted for the poor showing made by the Engineers in the dashes, will be back, as it is fast getting home again after a dreary march. Monday they deserted the boards and laps with a bit more pep and vim.

The Interfraternity Basketball

Achab, who threw two opponents, and Fred 'Baum in the final bout, defeated Fred 'Baum in the final bout, and Captain Sulzberger in the 145-pound division, the latter being a very hard fought match that was not decided until the final rush and relay was over.

The defeat in the Providence meet at the hands of Brown was the final dash of the season.
