Cardinal And Grey Is First Opponent to Meet Fast Harvard Battlers

Harvard's first varsity boxing team in the history of the school will provide the competition for the last men of the season for the Cardinal and Grey, when the two outfits meet in Haenensky Gym tomorrow night, at eight o'clock. The meet is not only an interesting test of the ability of having a varsity boxing squad at Harvard, and if successful, the encounter may be the beginning of another traditional Harvard-Technological rivalry.

The Institute's chances of starting this series of battles with a victory are good, as the team is in top condition, and the opposition will be a good test. The Institute has never lost to New York at this sport, and in the last meet, held at the Prospect Park, Brooklyn, the team did well.

CINNematography

Little is known about the atmosphere of the Harvard squad, as previous times this season was not entirely normal. It is rumored, however, that the Crimson outfit is in its finest condition, and that the men will be in top form.

As for the Technology men, all is not as fine. First, the first condition, and Tommy Bannister, Habit, Crop, has never assembled for one reason or another. There is no encouragement, as his absence was regrettable.
