ABOLISHMENT OF THE CIRCUS

LAST evening at a regular meeting of the Institute Committee, it was decided that the Institute Committee goes on record as favoring the abolishment of Technology Circus.

This decision was made after intense consideration and discussion. The Committee favored this action as a body, however, although there were several of the members who felt that it was advisable.

Future Institute Committees can re-introduce the Circus at the Institute at any time, if the situation so requires.

Those responsible for the operation of the Circus have their responsibilities, and the Institute Committee did not want to be found guilty of any direct responsibility for the situation at present.

Those members of the student body have always been willing to support the Circus. However, the situation is such that it may be necessary to consider other forms of recreation for the students.

THOSE SIGNUPS AGAIN

With the arrival of spring winds and sight-seeing tubs on the Charles River Basin, the student body has once again turned its thoughts to those singsups that are offered during the spring season. However, these singsups are not open to the public at this time.

The Student Council has recently revised the rules for the spring singsups, and these new rules will be enforced during the upcoming years.

The Student Council has also decided to make the singsups more interesting and efficient by introducing new activities and games.

The Student Council is committed to providing the student body with a fun and exciting spring season, and it is looking forward to seeing everyone participate in these events.

Abolishment of the Circus: In a recent meeting of the Institute Committee, a decision was made to favor the abolishment of Technology Circus. This decision was made after careful consideration and discussion. The Committee favored this action as a body, although some members had different opinions.

In the future, Institute Committees can reintroduce the Circus at any time if the situation so requires. Those responsible for the operation of the Circus have their responsibilities, and the Institute Committee did not want to be found guilty of any direct responsibility for the current situation.

Those members of the student body who have always been willing to support the Circus will continue to do so in the future. However, the current situation may necessitate considering other forms of recreation for the students.
