De Thierry Tells of German Hydraulic Laboratory Methods in First Lecture

Will Show Managing Method in Continuing Series of Talks Today

Stream flow and its resultant effects may be reproduced exactly in the hydraulic laboratory by means of small scale models according to Prof. E. de Thierry, foremost hydraulic engineer of Europe, who spoke on this subject to an audience in room 5-330 today at 2 o'clock.

Professor de Thierry is expected to show moving pictures depicting actual laboratory research as it is being conducted in Germany today.

It has been shown in the hydraulic laboratories of Germany that, for instance, the action of a certain stream on an obstruction in its path may be actually shown and photographed through constructing a small scale model of the stream and obstruction and then running water which contains a suspension ofgraphite or other suitable material through the model.

Professor de Thierry was born in Geneva, 1857, the son of an Englishman, and received a large part of his early education in Switzerland and then proceeded to win the greater part of his prominence through his practical, theoretical and experimental work on hydraulics in Germany.
