To the Comrades of the Board of The Tech.

It has recently come to our notice that the faculty of the engineering department has once again, and without apparent reason, raised its fees. This action is highly regrettable and in direct violation of the spirit of the faculty's own rules. It is to the interest of the students, and indeed of the entire faculty to remember that the ultimate welfare of the students is inseparable from the welfare of the faculty. The students, therefore, are entitled to a voice in the determination of policies that affect them. We therefore appeal to the Board of the Institute to reconsider this action and to take such steps as may be necessary to prevent a continuance of this practice.

The Open Forum

In the face of the present economic crisis, it is incumbent upon the students of MIT to consider the implications of the recent rise in tuition fees. The increase in tuition is a direct consequence of the faculty's need to fund their own programs and activities. However, it is important to recognize that the students are the ultimate beneficiaries of these programs and activities. It is, therefore, necessary to ensure that the students' interests are protected and that their voice is heard in the decision-making process.

The Old Countess

In the Old Countess, Anne Douglas Haggard has again produced a masterful work. The story is set in a small town in New England, where the protagonist, a young girl, is engaged in a passionate love affair with a local boy. The story is beautifully written and deeply moving. The characters are well drawn and the plot is well constructed. The Old Countess is a story that will appeal to readers of all ages.

We need a Score Board

Any athletic field without a scoreboard is like a class room with- out a blackboard. It seems strange that the Institute teams have grown so fast in the last year that the standing on the scoreboard is not as important as the standing on the field. In many ways, the scoreboard is more important because it gives us a chance to see how we're progressing.

As We See The Movies

The metropolis is a town where the people are made up of two types: those who are poor and those who are rich. The poor are the workers, and the rich are the owners of the factories. The poor live in the streets, and the rich live in the houses.
