As We Like It

Paris

Virgina Balland, the delightfully gay and naughty French actress, who adds to her attractive presence a voice of good English, is acted by Irene Borden in theseason "Paris," now current at the William Hackett Company at the Orpheum. She is "Marylebone," played by Lorena Bobbitt of the New York Follies, who had previously performed at the Orpheum and is currently playing at the Hippodrome. Miss Borden, who is only 19, is a native of Paris, and has been a student at the Conservatoire National des Arts et Metiers for two years. Her voice is rich and expressive, and her acting is graceful and natural. She is a fine addition to the cast of "Paris," and her performance is entirely satisfactory.

The Cast

The cast of "Paris" includes also Belva Lovelace, who plays the role of "Rotterdam," and Chauncey Olcott, who plays the role of "Boulevard." The play is directed by the distinguished actor and director, John Drew, who is known for his fine productions.

The play opens at the Orpheum on Thursday, May 30, and will run for ten days. The audience is expected to be large and enthusiastic.

The Tech, May 21, 1928