RATHER hard on the poor Tosh man who have been running on their own state licenses and registrations (if any), was the Police Department's action in this state who Safety Campaign. Not only was traffic on the Harvard Bridge up, but at the end one came to the embarrassing questionnaire, who question, was to accurate fashion, "Where's your line between a violation and a traffic ticket?"

They were rather lenient with transgressors, but it is important that they will take action to the fullest possible degree.

We are hardly in a position to comment on the efficiency of the Police Department, but we believe that the measures they have taken are effective in dealing with the problem.

The students here are very much aware of their students' and registrars' regulations. It is important that they understand them and follow them to the letter of the law.

There may be some fire in all this pacific smoke, but it hardly seems worthy of much consideration.
