A pencil put Peary on top of the world

OTHER explorers had great personal courage, unlimited energy, and vision—unhampered and unfazed. But Peary had one thing more. He had the grasp of every detail—as seen in the care which guided the pencil in his first-counted hand. After each day's research he calculated a methodical course to make sure of the next day's progress to the Pole. To face each day's reckoning as if it were the most important of all days is characteristic of men in the telephone industry. That viewpoint, expressed in the varied terms of applied science, laboratory research, financing and management, justify Bell System men in their respective fields of public service.
