SUCCESSFUL RITUAL

TECH SHOW 1929 has passed on to the realm of by-gones. With it has gone much advantage, and from it has been gained much. The Tech Show has been changed—dramatically transferred from the old ideas of imitating the costly and impressive musical comedies, the production was made up of short skits, which would be easy to stage in a school gymnasium.

A bad impression of the new idea was made at the outset. The first act did not succeed in making the first impression. However, after some number of difficulties, the work was held back. An early part of the set was added between the first and second numbers, which served to improve the show. Added to this was the fact that the entire evening was late in starting, the delay hurrying the players and resulting in cutting a number of the skits.

General disapproval of the production was voiced. Surely it was not a production that could be accepted at Harvard University. And many thought it considerably worse. Punters looked for a complete failure and optimists were doubtful that it would ever become in any manner a great drama. While the cast was working hard all this past week, it looked as if another activity had failed.

The managers, coaches and cast of Tech Show have done something of which they may feel justly proud. Not at all perfect, "A Tech Riot" came out a poor piece in a truly credible manner. The chorus particularly deserves much praise, for their music was sung and played good training. The work was kept up to par all this past week, and the show produced an excellent novel. The idea is sound, and experience promises much.

Away from the Grind

LAMDA CHI ALPHA

The first of the operettas presented by the Lambda Chi Alpha group was a hit. There were the usual initiates in the cast, and at the end of the performances a model was fitted over the head of the initiate, and the initiates were asked to make a promise to the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

There was a closed dance at the Phi Gamma Delta house last Friday night. The guests were invited to attend the dance, and the Phi Gamma Delta house produced an excellent show. The idea is sound, and experience promises much.

SIGMA CHI

One of the largest groups of the meeting was the party at the Sigma Chi fraternity house. The party was attended by a large number of students, and the Sigma Chi fraternity house produced an excellent show. The idea is sound, and experience promises much.

Tomorrow afternoon another of the parties will be held at the Sigma Chi fraternity house. The party will be attended by a large number of students, and the Sigma Chi fraternity house will produce an excellent show. The idea is sound, and experience promises much.

The Editorial Spectulum

In looking through the papers of the Spectulum, one is struck with the fact that the Spectulum is the oldest student journal in the country. The Spectulum was founded in 1859, and has been published ever since.
