As We See the Movies

METROPOLITAN

As a reminder of the days gone by when New York was a city of small flats where the noisy flat was their infancy, "Shall We Dance?" appears much too gentle and unromantic, and, with all the old glamour stripped away, the picture looks more like that of old-time prosperity than of those days when all the world danced, and saw the figures of Ballhaus on the street where the jungle of little cafes and couples and men and women is going about their business.

The story is trivial. James Stewart and Rosalind Russell, in a perfectly charming performance, are the main characters. It is a story of the jungle where the jungle of little cafes and couples and men and women is going about their business. Her new life is one of currents and eddies. She is a dancer, and he is a sailor, and they are invested with all the old glamour stripped away.

Not half as bad as the title, the story is one of currents and eddies. She is a dancer, and he is a sailor, and they are invested with all the old glamour stripped away.

The picture is a complete success. It is a story of the jungle where the jungle of little cafes and couples and men and women is going about their business. Her new life is one of currents and eddies. She is a dancer, and he is a sailor, and they are invested with all the old glamour stripped away, and our sympathy is with them.

The performance is uniformly excellent. Rosalind Russell gives another of her charming, subtle and intelligent portrayals, and James Stewart is a perfect match for her. The supporting cast is excellent. The picture is a complete success.

The performance is uniformly excellent. Rosalind Russell gives another of her charming, subtle and intelligent portrayals, and James Stewart is a perfect match for her. The supporting cast is excellent. The picture is a complete success.

Alwayt Kent Holds Music Contest

Over Radio to Choose Best Singers

College students throughout the country, particularly those who in some way or another are connected with the musical world, were unusually interested in the Alwayt Kent Foundation plans for its 12th annual music contest. The Foundation, in order to select the ten best young singers in the country, had announced a radio competition, the winner to be selected by a recognized school of music. Significant is the fact that the first prize is $1,000. The judges of the contest have three months to study the tapes, and the selection of the ten young singers is to be made in an open, and didn't close for the rest of its run.

For that reason we have added the word "radiant." Two women, two men and one girl from each district will be put on the radio. The rest of their adventures take place in the jungle because of some mysterious event that all of the ten finalists will return to the United States. The awards this year will be as follows:

Winners of first place, $2,500 each, and one 1929 "Youth of America" scholarship.

Winners of second place, $1,500 each, and one 1929 "Youth of America" scholarship.

Winners of third place, $1,000 each, and one 1929 "Youth of America" scholarship.

Winners of fourth place, $750 each, and one 1929 "Youth of America" scholarship.

Winners of fifth place, $500 each, and one 1929 "Youth of America" scholarship.

The Open Forum

As a reminder of the days gone by when New York was a city of small flats where the noisy flat was their infancy, "Shall We Dance?" appears much too gentle and unromantic, and, with all the old glamour stripped away, the picture looks more like that of old-time prosperity than of those days when all the world danced, and saw the figures of Ballhaus on the street where the jungle of little cafes and couples and men and women is going about their business.

The story is trivial. James Stewart and Rosalind Russell, in a perfectly charming performance, are the main characters. It is a story of the jungle where the jungle of little cafes and couples and men and women is going about their business. Her new life is one of currents and eddies. She is a dancer, and he is a sailor, and they are invested with all the old glamour stripped away, and our sympathy is with them.

The performance is uniformly excellent. Rosalind Russell gives another of her charming, subtle and intelligent portrayals, and James Stewart is a perfect match for her. The supporting cast is excellent. The picture is a complete success.

The performance is uniformly excellent. Rosalind Russell gives another of her charming, subtle and intelligent portrayals, and James Stewart is a perfect match for her. The supporting cast is excellent. The picture is a complete success.

Our Twenty Percent Autocracy

Day after day, year after year, the lazy indifference of students toward their own government continues. The student body's political activities allow less than a quarter of the whole group to control its activities. The rest haven't the interest to vote on propositions, nor do they refrain from attending meetings, and when the interested members of the organization finally attempt to "grasp" about what has happened.

The student body's political activities allow less than a quarter of the whole group to control its activities. The rest haven't the interest to vote on propositions, nor do they refrain from attending meetings, and when the interested members of the organization finally attempt to "grasp" about what has happened.

The student body's political activities allow less than a quarter of the whole group to control its activities. The rest haven't the interest to vote on propositions, nor do they refrain from attending meetings, and when the interested members of the organization finally attempt to "grasp" about what has happened.

The student body's political activities allow less than a quarter of the whole group to control its activities. The rest haven't the interest to vote on propositions, nor do they refrain from attending meetings, and when the interested members of the organization finally attempt to "grasp" about what has happened.