Although my opinion will probably appear some time in the coming report of the Voo Doo censor committee to the Institute Board of Overseers, I believe that my views may be put on record here, since the matter is still within the range of free discussion.

I believe that Voo Doo should be allowed to continue publication, for a while, at least; this magazine stands in character at least equal to the average college magazine, and is considerably superior to the average humor magazine.

I see no reason why this could not succeed, if the proper measures are taken. It would be infinitely more beneficial than a stringent code of regulations, and the Voo Doo magazine would cause many to wonder whether, in any other college, such an absurd system of supervision should be permitted.

For the eleven years of its existence Voo Doo has been the subject of ridicule and derision, and I believe that the Institute should allow it to continue publication, for at least another year, in the hope that it may succeed in the future. If the Institute does not allow it to continue publication, I believe that the Voo Doo magazine should be closed, and the students should have no further trial because of one doubtful incident.

In the first place, I acknowledge the fact that Voo Doo has not been published in a manner that is entirely satisfactory, and that further material such as is found in the book, "Back Bay Number," was not to be criticized severely. While I do not believe that the magazine should be punished, I do believe that it should be criticized, and that the Institute should make an effort to improve it.

In the second place, I believe that the Institute should consider the character of this publication, and the character of the students who are responsible for it. I believe that the Institute should not give up its efforts to improve the magazine, but should continue to work on the living, for the story of the "Back Bay Number" was not to be criticized severely.

In the third place, I believe that the Institute should consider the character of the students who are responsible for the magazine. I believe that the Institute should not give up its efforts to improve the magazine, but should continue to work on the living, for the story of the "Back Bay Number" was not to be criticized severely.