Waves Break Student's Sailboat from Mooring

Breaking from its mooring on Saturday, the sailboat of James A. Brown, '30, was driven ashore on the Charles during the heavy gales of yesterday. The wind, estimated at 60 to 70 miles per hour, tore off the canvas from the sailboat and blew the latter out into the mouth of the Charles River, and blown rapidly eastward. Finally it was caught on a sandbar, and was hoisted back over on its beam end. From the sailboat the scene was exceptionally beautiful. A rope was fastened to the sailboat and its crew was drawn on the walking trolley back to the station of the police officers.
