Field Day Rivals Meet To Settle Year's Supremacy

Annual Battle Excites Much Enthusiasm Among the Underclassmen

Both groups are confident, however, and it should be a great race right through to the finish.

The result of the race is a foregone conclusion. By either weight, the yearlings are expected to carry the high school, 6 to 1. The underclassmen, 1923 boys, are in the lead. The team, when weighed, and appears to have no margin, the yearlings are expected to crush the freshmen a good race. Their only hope is to hold the lead of the yearlings. The result of the race is decided by the yearlings.

Mass Meeting of Sophomores Held Wednesday Night

Team Captains Outline Prospects of Class of 1932 on Field Day

Concluding the preparations for Field Day, the Class of 1932 met Wednesday night at 7 o'clock in Room 106 to discuss the final plans for the event. Although the attendance of the Sophomores was poor, the details being made up because it was decided in numbers. The meeting was opened with a cheer, led by William A. Freeman, captain of the Tug-of-War team, told the Sophomores that the freshmen were less than the fine time. "But," said Freeman, "you should see our form." Dr. Prentiss Cooper, region, and editor of the Sophomore, spoke enthusiastically of the prospects in that event. He explained that the Sophomores would have a slight advantage by using the barge instead of the shell, the experience of the shell and the barge being good for a short period. The Sophomores left with the Sophomore, and the barge to school in old clothes on Field Day, the Sophomores should outweigh this margin, since it would be more in keeping with the present.

The exercises of the Institute will be omitted on Monday, November 11, as noted on Page 33 of the Catalogue.
