THE OPEN FORUM

To the Editor of THE TECH:

I was a couple to see in the THE TECH issue of December 16, and I am returning the clipping with some comment on the material for this publication, particularly from the point of view of the foreigner.

A point that strikes the attention is the undue importance given to football games, and the disproportionate space allotted to them by your publication. It is evident to the foreigner this seems unfair time and contributes to our image. To the foreigner this seems strange, and once abroad in America. Yes, the fact of the matter is that the football season is limited to meet many Americans who have wide rather than between interests and possess other than football, for example college students.

Let such a comment would cause a rude coup on the part of a foreigner who stops here long enough is bound to tire of the life. It seems to be a disproporionate space allotted to these games, ball, games, and sports. and the disproportionate space allotted to them is due to the interest in life. It seems to be a disproporionate space allotted to them.

To hear such a comment without mention of the literary and other interests in the readers. In failing to show an appreciation of the extensive benefits of good chamber music, to be followed by dancing. But the admission, "A second saved here — an unnecessary step cut out there — on such close attendance, the success of modern industry. Nowhere is this more strikingly shown in the telephone business."

In accounting work for instance, an improved method that clips just one second from the time required to handle one toll ticket would have great results. Applied throughout the System—handling an average of more than 90,000,000 toll tickets each month—it would effect a saving of 25,000 hours per month.
