SQUARE DEAL INSURANCE

MODERN industry sets standards for the performance of the employees, so that it can be determined how near to maximum efficiency the concerns are operating. And in some cases the workers are given the opportunity to insure a fair adjustment of the rates, by the establishment of a committee of employees together with representatives of the management. Men who feel that the established rates are too low are invited to submit them to the committee for reconsideration.

Technology has a comparable system, where the Faculty is the management and the students are the employees. The rates are the catalogue hours for the courses given at the Institute, presumably totalling fifty hours per week. The Faculty has decided that fifty hours is the reasonable time the Institute may ask of the students, and any distortion of the course ratings will necessarily deform this schedule.

The committee in this case is the Student-Faculty Curriculum Committee, of which little is heard, but which accomplishes much in the course of the year. In its meetings, complete freedom of the students is brought up for consideration, each faction presenting its own side of the question. But this is not the only problem treated, for the students frequently come in contact with the administration, and of the faculty of a particular course to the engineer specializing in a different field.

Complaints of this sort, when born by the students in the name of education, or when aired with a grievance, is injustice or ineffectiveness in some phase of his education. In its vicarious way, it corrects many an evil without the furore which would ordinarily be created, and its authority of more experienced faculty members is great and significant. The committee, proving that the experiment merits the time devoted.

BRITISH STUDENTS STOLID AND QUIET

Chesteron Says Reserve Seen

On College Campuses

The characteristic reserve of the British student is the result of universal fellowship among all students. In America students meet each other for the first time, and society has not yet adjusted itself for this. Students strive to get together an independent future, and are desirous of showing that it is possible to control the society. This is the root of all our college parties.

In England a large part of the students are in reserve, and it is feared that the English are getting too much of this reserve. Even so, English students are not slow to reserve the right to speak.

At Illinois it's-

A LONG Green Street, away from the campus leaders stroll ... in old-fashioned boats, in silent strength of hundreds of Champs ... there is one clique that says, I want to belong to the biggest vote. At Illinois it's called the Jackets.

THREE things are necessary, Perry W. Felton, manager of Edgeworth, Inc., has said. He has said that these three things are not only necessary, but if they are not present, the biggest vote is not possible.
