

Department of Civil Engineering Maintains Building in 1

Timbers of Fennel Hall and Old Buildings Are On Exhibition

Turbed away in a corner of the Institute, from which many också aside do not even a sound, buildings that have been standing for 50 years are being removed and placed in a temporary display at the Fennel Hall, 10th Street.

For about eight years the Department of Architecture and the Archeological Institute of America have been making plans to construct a new building for the Institute, which will be located on the corner of Mass. Avenue and 10th Street. During this period, the old buildings have been standing in the foreground of the Institute, serving as a monument to the past.

The old buildings have been standing for 50 years, and the owners of the Institute are now planning to remove them and establish a new building in their place. The old buildings have been in existence for a long time, and there is a great deal of interest in them. The Institute has been planning to construct a new building for some time, and the old buildings have been in the background of the Institute's plans.

The old buildings have been in existence for a long time, and there is a great deal of interest in them. The Institute has been planning to construct a new building for some time, and the old buildings have been in the background of the Institute's plans.