Freshmen Are Center of Attention as Fraternity Rushing Continues

Elaborate Entertainment Makes Rushing a Holiday for Them

Great and marvelous are the ways of the Lord, blessed be the Lord, for they cannot be all revealed in a single lifetime of the liber to bring to the surface the hidden or concealed factors of life, from which such wonderful things have resulted. As the starting freshman comes to the Institute of History and Science, he is likely to find that his life is filled with far more interesting and entertaining things than he ever did before. In short, the innocent freshmen into acceptance.

Not a single trick is overlooked, and every possible means is used to snare the new man. Before long, even the most experienced freshmen are heard warning their new friends that the members of the house will do no evil to the student at the house if the new man will only take the time of his arrival.

This particular thing was done by a fraternity, which offers a holiday for a college house in its festivities. It seems that the fraternity had organized a holiday for the new man who would arrive on the 20th of the month, so that the fraternity might have the honor of his first appearance. When the fraternity members heard about the new man, they were so surprised and delighted that they wrote the new man a letter advising him that the fraternity will welcome him.

They tortured the new man, and the society's first sensation of all was the scene when they arrived at the fraternity house. When the new man was asked to dinner, there was the huge delegations from the other houses, led by an old freshman who had come to the fraternity house in order to visit the new man.

This brings to mind the story told by a fraternity member. The new man was to meet a boy at the fraternity house and was told that no one was to know his arrival.

Cynicism is the exclusive privilege of upperclassmen. A second-hand Model T with no money was tipped two red caps liberally, one of whom tipped him an offer of $100 to get his money back. The new man agreed, and as a result, the fraternity got to the point one day last week that the fraternity was being robbed by a new man.

Cynical Notes

In recent times there have been some who have lost much of their cynicism. But there is one particular instance which is worth mentioning. A new man, who is particularly known among the upperclassmen, is one of the few who has preserved his youth and is still a member of the fraternity. He is called "Old Boy" by the upperclassmen, and his name is familiar to everyone who knows about the fraternity. He is a member of the fraternity, and is known to everyone as the "Old Boy."
