Doctor Stratton
Dedicated Life to Scientific World

Corporation Chairs Largest Responsible for Organizing
Bureau of Standards

(Employed from Page One)

For a number of years Dr. Stratton had been an officer in the National Bureau of Standards at Wash-

Washington, D.C., and was an

the attention of Lymon H. Gage, who was then

Dr. Stratton was asked to draft a bill for the late 19th century. He

He

from that time

the Institute of Technology, and from that time and a large group of splendid buildings.

Becomes President of Technology

In 1923 Dr. Stratton was asked to become the in 1923, Dr. Stratton decided to divide the

the new administrative body of the Institute. In and Dr. Karl T. Campion, noted

in 1890, became chairman of the Corpora-

a position which he occupied at the

Dr. Stratton proceeded from the

the National Bureau of Standards, and left for Wash-

the office of Captain, and from 1885

of Pennsylvania, Incorporated, is typical, with an average

held many honorary degrees from various his degree of Bachelor of

In 1893 Dr. Stratton was in the field of Electrochemicals, and from that time was the first to be awarded the degree of Doctor of in the United States.

Member Many Dignities

Dr. Stratton held the honorary degree of Doctor of in Illinois, Dr. Stratton held the

to the National Bureau of Standards, and left for Wash-

He was an officer of the Legion of Honor, in Europe and as an honorary member of the Franklin Institute and the

He was a member of the honorary society of Phi Beta Kappa, and was also a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Astronomy

He was a member of the honorary society of Phi Beta Kappa, and was also a member of the North Hall of Walker Memorial.

Was Member Many Societies

Dr. Stratton was a member of the following scientific and engineering societies:

American Chemical Society, American Society for Testing Materials, American

the Council on Scientific Research, American Philosophical Society, American

the National Research Council, American Philosophical Society, American

the American Chemical Society, the American Society for Testing Materials,

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

Dr. Stratton was a member of the following scientific and engineering societies:

American Chemical Society, American Society for Testing Materials, American

the National Research Council, American Philosophical Society, American

the American Chemical Society, the American Society for Testing Materials,

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

Doctor Stratton, Select Life to Scientific World

Corporation Chairs Largest Responsible for Organizing
Bureau of Standards

(Employed from Page One)

For a number of years Dr. Stratton had been an officer in the National Bureau of Standards at Wash-

Washington, D.C., and was an

the attention of Lymon H. Gage, who was then

Dr. Stratton was asked to draft a bill for the late 19th century. He

from that time

the Institute of Technology, and from that time

and a large group of splendid buildings.

Becomes President of Technology

In 1923 Dr. Stratton was asked to become the

in 1923, Dr. Stratton decided to divide the

the new administrative body of the Institute. In

and Dr. Karl T. Campion, noted

in 1890, became chairman of the Corpora-

a position which he occupied at the

Dr. Stratton proceeded from the

the National Bureau of Standards, and left for Wash-

the office of Captain, and from 1885

of Pennsylvania, Incorporated, is typical, with an average

held many honorary degrees from various

his degree of Bachelor of

In 1893 Dr. Stratton was

in the field of Electrochemicals, and from that time

was the first to be awarded the degree of Doctor of

in Illinois, Dr. Stratton held the

to the National Bureau of Standards, and left for Wash-

He was an officer of the Legion of Honor, in Europe and

as an honorary member of the Franklin Institute and the

He was a member of the honorary society of Phi Beta Kappa, and was also a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Astronomy

He was a member of the honorary society of Phi Beta Kappa, and was also a member of the North Hall of Walker Memorial.

Was Member Many Societies

Dr. Stratton was a member of the following scientific and engineering societies:

American Chemical Society, American Society for Testing Materials, American

the National Research Council, American Philosophical Society, American

the American Chemical Society, the American Society for Testing Materials,

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

Doctor Stratton, Select Life to Scientific World

Corporation Chairs Largest Responsible for Organizing
Bureau of Standards

(Employed from Page One)

For a number of years Dr. Stratton had been an officer in the National Bureau of Standards at Wash-

Washington, D.C., and was an

the attention of Lymon H. Gage, who was then

Dr. Stratton was asked to draft a bill for the late 19th century. He

from that time

the Institute of Technology, and from that time

and a large group of splendid buildings.

Becomes President of Technology

In 1923 Dr. Stratton was asked to become the

in 1923, Dr. Stratton decided to divide the

the new administrative body of the Institute. In

and Dr. Karl T. Campion, noted

in 1890, became chairman of the Corpora-

a position which he occupied at the

Dr. Stratton proceeded from the

the National Bureau of Standards, and left for Wash-

the office of Captain, and from 1885

of Pennsylvania, Incorporated, is typical, with an average

held many honorary degrees from various

his degree of Bachelor of

In 1893 Dr. Stratton was

in the field of Electrochemicals, and from that time

was the first to be awarded the degree of Doctor of

in Illinois, Dr. Stratton held the

to the National Bureau of Standards, and left for Wash-

He was an officer of the Legion of Honor, in Europe and

as an honorary member of the Franklin Institute and the

He was a member of the honorary society of Phi Beta Kappa, and was also a member of

the American Association for the Advancement of Astronomy

He was a member of the honorary society of Phi Beta Kappa, and was also a member of the North Hall of Walker Memorial.

Was Member Many Societies

Dr. Stratton was a member of the following scientific and engineering societies:

American Chemical Society, American Society for Testing Materials, American

the National Research Council, American Philosophical Society, American

the American Chemical Society, the American Society for Testing Materials,

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the

He was also a member of the