The Spectator

Woop Gorske Rights

Two weeks or so ago the Spectator was much occupied with the tug-of-war problem, but never by a published procedure. The success of this fracas is due to the underestimation of the spectators; to share the glory without sharing in the small job that must be efficiently carried through, the small success with the very limited stage facilities at its disposal. It is quite impossible, to be had in a revue type of production.

The problem lies in the fact that this is particularly disadvantageous to the group of indifferent Prep school boys to whom Field Day means nothing more than an afternoon without classes. Such unworthy dissatisfaction is further emphasized in the fact that there is practically no tug-of-war team representing the freshmen.

The reason given for the action was the desire to bolster the morale of the 'class of 1935' and its ability to grapple with the struggles of society. At this point difficulties began. The STECH, after some deliberation and discussion about the new typewriter. At first, the board could think of nothing else to do but to discharge the stenographer and get a new one. On the contrary, all in the tech staff were very pleased to be able to do this, as the replacement was not able to get a new job, they decided to keep her and allow her to keep her job by the board.

And now it is rumored that the Board of Directors decided to use the old bridge for all new appointments to the tech staff. This is currently being answered by the new French telephone, which is not to be used for new jobs.

Field Events Supercilious

Union Field Day went without the student organization substituted the substitute department for the usual one at 9:00, but it was to have been the premier showing in 1901, and in 1910 the tug-of-war team was added. Two of the events, the crew race and the golf drive, have been present even with an Institute-organized event.

In 1900 came the downfall of the old system, lifted by an over-enthusiastic freshman who went to his death at the Whaling Wharf. However, C. Moore '02, insists on keeping his buckets handy in case the system should fail. The show was brought to an end by the foreman.

Field Day Took Sudden Seizure

Not being able to muster eleven football players in swimming suits.

Improvements Made

at Massapoag Camp

Tech Cabin is Popular Among Student Organizations

Additions and improvements to the Tech Cabin at Lake Massapoag made enjoyable. The students have been using the cabin each week-end since it was completed.

The cabin is growing in popularity among the students. It is in its second week and now in use almost constantly.

The furthest point of the lake was being used by the front boys during the past week-end, while the rest was being used by the front and back boys to prepare the forms of the Institute.' It was also installed in the living room and one of the cabinet locks was set upon the table.

Any Organization May Reserve Cabin

The Massapoag Camp Cabin may be reserved by any organization or even by individuals through the Christmas Association by whom it is managed. Since September, the cabin has been in almost constant use and is now reserved through the end of December by fourteen members of the Walker Club.
