The Interfraternity Conference has never been more than a friendly get-together, it has been said. Presidents of the fraternities who comprise the Conference are in sympathy with the feeling that there is no actual power behind the organization; coercion follows their dictates is not only unknown but impossible. The spirit of the Conference is voluntary and is not effective over a period of years. Any group is free to go, if it wishes, and outside groups may obtain membership by petition and ultimate election.

Therefore, if we attempt to draw analogies, or to discover tangible acts or mistakes to be laid to the responsibility of the Conference, we find ourselves frustrated. The Interfraternity Conference has never been more than a friendly get-together, it is intentionally so, and will continue so unless the undesirable undertones during the fall, resulting from a slight dissatisfaction within the combined group, cause us to act. And even then, the intervention of higher authorities. At present there is no actual power behind the organization; coercion following its dictates is not only unknown but impossible. The spirit of the Conference is voluntary and is not effective over a period of years. Any group is free to go, if it wishes, and outside groups may obtain membership by petition and ultimate election.

Therefore, if we attempt to draw analogies, or to discover tangibles acts or mistakes to be laid to the responsibility of the Conference, we find ourselves frustrated. The Interfraternity Conference has never been more than a friendly get-together, it is intentionally so, and will continue so unless the undesirable undertones during the fall, resulting from a slight dissatisfaction within the combined group, cause us to act. And even then, the intervention of higher authorities. At present there is no actual power behind the organization; coercion following its dictates is not only unknown but impossible. The spirit of the Conference is voluntary and is not effective over a period of years. Any group is free to go, if it wishes, and outside groups may obtain membership by petition and ultimate election.

Therefore, if we attempt to draw analogies, or to discover tangibles acts or mistakes to be laid to the responsibility of the Conference, we find ourselves frustrated. The Interfraternity Conference has never been more than a friendly get-together, it is intentionally so, and will continue so unless the undesirable undertones during the fall, resulting from a slight dissatisfaction within the combined group, cause us to act. And even then, the intervention of higher authorities. At present there is no actual power behind the organization; coercion following its dictates is not only unknown but impossible. The spirit of the Conference is voluntary and is not effective over a period of years. Any group is free to go, if it wishes, and outside groups may obtain membership by petition and ultimate election.