BEAVER BRAWN

Perishable surprise and mum excitement has been registered concerning the hockey team victory over Dartmouth, Monday. Also it gives added hope in the final playoff game against B. U. this weekend. Both teams have won one of the games, and the final should be more than the usual fast and furious.

"Click" Bell, skip of representative of Technology in two major recent Saturday tournaments, places the emphasis on the team's need for one last tune-up. Bell has made it known that his team will be at their best if they play in their own "buck fever," a considerable team, and it will be necessary to lose their qualms at the sight of a registered target, the purpose of the team to hit it. It is felt that Lieutenant Bicher, the team's coach, can guide them through these glories, by placing in the B.A.A. games, against record-holders and world champions. In the evening he surfed the heels of Simpson and Singer, world title holders in the 40- and 60-yard dashes, respectively. Equally praiseworthy was the sportsmanship of Mulligan in the meeting earlier that night. After both Princeton and Boston men had fallen in a spill in the race, Mulligan stopped, forcing a rerun of the race. In the second running, the Beaver gained a second place.

While dealing in repetitions, a further word might go in about the basketball team. As anticipated, they had no great amount of difficulty in disposing of their respective opponents. The varsity gained a second place.

FRESHMAN RIFLEMAN LOSE IN TWO STARTS

While the varsity proceeds to clash with West Point in one of its most important times of the year, the freshman riflemen have taken on three teams with negative results. Due to "buck fever," according to Lieutenant Bicher, the riflemen's target, the team is not hitting it their stride. It is felt that Lieutenant Bicher can very well be at his best if they play in their own "buck fever," and the team will be justified as an old to a varsity material. The Freshmen competing meet this week, with New York University taking the duos of 1250, varsity owning, North Harvard and DePauw University also competed. The teams will clash with West Point, Technology losing the to the tune of 321 to 117, and Army 66 to 25, and DePauw 38 to 64.
