CRABAPPLE TREE FILLS HOLE MADE IN DU PONT COURT

LARGEST IN NEW ENGLAND

As the result of the generosity of an anonymous donor, the department of horticulture has acquired an exceptionally fine crabapple tree from Beacon Hill. According to Mr. W. H. Blossom, the veteran nurseryman in charge of moving the tree, it is more than an hundred years old and is the largest of its kind in New England.

Today, when the tree is scheduled to arrive at the Institute, it has stood in the center of a plot of old new england homes’ land on the esplanade at the foot of Pradesh Street. For years the residents of the neighborhood have been anxious to view the tree in the late spring season of its beauty, and it is not so far away from the earth ball whose the mowers have left around the roots, making it impossible to move the tree without the aid of a crane.

It was last interviewed, last night, Mr. B. H. B. O. who, a partner in the B. H. O. Co., who handles all the Institute’s tree planting activities, said that he expected it will arrive with the tree at about 5 o’clock this afternoon.

As a result of the change, the New England States, the flowering crabapple, will be available from the Botanical Garden on Beacon Hill. The blossoms themselves are small pink flowers and are considered to be very beautiful by those who are familiar with them.

Duquesne Instructor Discusses Views Held by President of Irish Free State

Friend of De Valera Reviews Present Situation

With the rise of Eamon De Valera to the presidency, considerable interest is once again centered about Ireland. Reflecting strongly on the present situation in Ireland, Mr. O’Connor, a former college chum of De Valera, gives an interesting estimate of the man and his policies.

In commenting on the present situation, Mr. O’Connor first remarked that Ireland’s President is somewhat of an international figure. As the result of the generosity of an anonymous donor, the department of horticulture has acquired an exceptionally fine crabapple tree from Beacon Hill. According to Mr. W. H. Blossom, the veteran nurseryman in charge of moving the tree, it is more than an hundred years old and is the largest of its kind in New England.

Today, when the tree is scheduled to arrive at the Institute, it has stood in the center of a plot of old new england homes’ land on the esplanade at the foot of Pradesh Street. For years the residents of the neighborhood have been anxious to view the tree in the late spring season of its beauty, and it is not so far away from the earth ball whose the mowers have left around the roots, making it impossible to move the tree without the aid of a crane.

It was last interviewed, last night, Mr. B. H. B. O. who, a partner in the B. H. O. Co., who handles all the Institute’s tree planting activities, said that he expected it will arrive with the tree at about 5 o’clock this afternoon.

As a result of the change, the New England States, the flowering crabapple, will be available from the Botanical Garden on Beacon Hill. The blossoms themselves are small pink flowers and are considered to be very beautiful by those who are familiar with them.

Duquesne Instructor Discusses Views Held by President of Irish Free State

Friend of De Valera Reviews Present Situation

With the rise of Eamon De Valera to the presidency, considerable interest is once again centered about Ireland. Reflecting strongly on the present situation in Ireland, Mr. O’Connor, a former college chum of De Valera, gives an interesting estimate of the man and his policies.

In commenting on the present situation, Mr. O’Connor first remarked that Ireland’s President is somewhat of an international figure. As the result of the generosity of an anonymous donor, the department of horticulture has acquired an exceptionally fine crabapple tree from Beacon Hill. According to Mr. W. H. Blossom, the veteran nurseryman in charge of moving the tree, it is more than an hundred years old and is the largest of its kind in New England.

Today, when the tree is scheduled to arrive at the Institute, it has stood in the center of a plot of old new england homes’ land on the esplanade at the foot of Pradesh Street. For years the residents of the neighborhood have been anxious to view the tree in the late spring season of its beauty, and it is not so far away from the earth ball whose the mowers have left around the roots, making it impossible to move the tree without the aid of a crane.

It was last interviewed, last night, Mr. B. H. B. O. who, a partner in the B. H. O. Co., who handles all the Institute’s tree planting activities, said that he expected it will arrive with the tree at about 5 o’clock this afternoon.

As a result of the change, the New England States, the flowering crabapple, will be available from the Botanical Garden on Beacon Hill. The blossoms themselves are small pink flowers and are considered to be very beautiful by those who are familiar with them.

Duquesne Instructor Discusses Views Held by President of Irish Free State