STUDENT MONTHLY MAKES APPEARANCE

"Our college student radical? Do they have any in your town?" We are aware of the world in which they live," says the Drifter in his column in The Nation of May 18, 1932. This question has been raised before by both students and faculty members, and it is a valid concern. The Drifter's question challenges us to consider how our college students perceive the world around them. Are they aware of the issues affecting their community? Are they engaged in discussions and debates about these issues?
