FRESHMEN EXPECTANT OF FIELD DAY VICTORY

Institute's track coach, with the assistance of several upperclassmen. Each of the twelve men comprising the team is required to run a half a lap around the inner track. In last year's event the class of 1934 out-classed the 1935 men conclusively, leading them by 200 points.

Eye See Crew Race

While the track event comes at the height of the day's excitement, the crew race, although quite as spectacularly, is viewed comparatively for spectators. Coming as it does in the early morning before most of the students are out of bed, it is only those who arise with the dawn or those who have remained awake throughout the night that have the opportunity to cheer their teams or postfix.

The tug-of-war is the shortest, but not the least exciting of the several events, for throughout its short duration, the non-partisans of each of the contending classes are literally tearing their vocal cords apart.

Last but not least on the program is the glove fight in which all members of the respective classes can give vent to the enthusiasm which has built up during the preceding events. It is largest in number of contestants but smallest in point value, one point going to the class capturing most gloves. While a team may be losing in the gathering of the other events, a victory in the glove fight means a moral Field Day victory if not an actual one.

Fifty Freshmen Try

For Field Day Crew

Fifty-old freshmen are industriously working out on the rowing machines to get themselves in shape for the coming Field Day battle on the 21st of October. With last year's varsity men helping him out as temporary coach, Al Dunning hopes to get the men on the water in a week's time.

So far, nearly a dozen first year candidates have admitted previous experience in the fine art of rowing, and form the nucleus of what promises to turn into an exceptionally strong squad. There also seems to be a high interest in the informal water sports, such as tennis and swimming, which are held after hours in the basement of the boathouse that houses the crew's equipment.

Amusements

STAGE

Colored—"The Green Pastures." The epic of the negro. Worth your time.

SCREEN

Orpheum—"Grand Hotel," at popular prices.

PLEDGE LISTS

In the Wednesday, October 6th, issue of THE TECH, a list of the pledges to Greek Letter fraternities will be published. A list of the names on the pledge list of each fraternity must be turned in to the News Room by 6 o'clock Tuesday night if it is to be published.

T. C. A. Book Service

Books listed in this term's General Bulletin will find a ready market at the T. C. A. book exchange in the basement of Walker Memorial at two-thirds cost price. There has been an exceptionally large demand for second hand books this year.
