A BIRD IN THE HAND

FRESHMAN Rushing is about over for another season, and the last day of the rush has made few, few interested. The newly pledged will learn that fraternity life is not one of resting. In the months to come, he has four years at the Institute more enjoyable, that will help him when he needs assistance, that will give him social ties with his work when he needs assistance, that will give him social contacts otherwise closed to him. But the obligations are not all one-sided. In return for the advantages of fraternity life he is expected to make certain contributions other than the merely personal. On one side.
