with which China has been in contact. The main reason for Japan's continued efforts is its need to stabilize its economic situation. Japan is facing a severe economic crisis, with high inflation rates and a large trade deficit. The government is trying to reduce spending and increase exports to bring down the budget deficit. In addition, Japan is under pressure from the United States to reduce its military spending and to refrain from aggressive behavior in the region. Japan has been engaged in a territorial dispute with China over the Senkaku/Diaoyu Islands, which has caused tensions between the two countries. In order to maintain its strategic position in the region, Japan may have to continue exerting pressure on China to avoid any sudden changes in its behavior. However, Japan has been careful not to provoke China, as it knows that a conflict could lead to a major military conflict in the region.
