A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.

A SCHEME FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT

A S the academic year opens the new man finds himself at the beginning of his undergraduate career. It is needless to point out how vital this period of his life is in a ground-work which is a combination of outside activities and studies. Many a freshman fails to realize, however, how much his personal activities and acquaintances in his first year may never be repeated. Advancement in an activity is based on achievement, and the freshman who fails to get ahead is as likely to be the last and least admired when he becomes a Senior.

When an individual is measured by the amount of effort which he puts into it. An outside activity can succeed in diverting the students mind from the daily run of his work or he can become so interested in it as to give his best efforts. It would be well, then, for the new man to examine the nature of the various activities which offer a real opportunity for an outside interest. These include the publications, the athletic teams, and the professional societies. The men in these activities start as freshmen and are advanced according to their ability and effort as they reach the upper classes.