THE POOR CAT

NOW that the second edition of the cat's scratching is in the hands of the victim who paid their quarters, we are beginning to hear those tails that were suppressed after the first issue in the hands of the victims who paid their quarters. Voo Doo's second masterpiece is a bitter disappointment. It contains but one or two good original jokes and a number of fairly funny ones cut from other college papers. The rest is just filler.

It must be remembered that the chorus is dead. It is counted among the deceased, he most certainly must be revolving slowly in his grave. For the modern Voo Doo is certainly only a shadow of the poor cat's successor.

The haughty attitude that was so becoming to the cat in his early days still remains. In the recent issue he advises that THE TECH refrain from printing an occasional joke. Then he adds that his job is to tell jokes, not give advice. He ought to tell jokes and a number of fairly funny ones cut from other college papers. The rest is just filler.

Luckily he was not an engineer, so instead of applying the first and second laws of thermodynamics and ending up with a bridge, he arrived at a plan whereby with the means at hand he could get himself and his possessions over the river in safety. The reader, with a little thought, can figure out how.

One of the objects he had to transport across the stream.

Willow Theatre

COMMISSIONER-LAW by Elmer Rice, presented by the National Drama Players, has for its setting the office of New York's lowest law firm. The role of George Simon, head of the firm, is taken by Walter Gilbert. Several years ago Simon had allowed a man to fake an alibi which saved him from life imprisonment for a petty offense. Simon is threatened with disbarment as an excuse for his acquisition of knowledge of the New Simon's blue blooded wife reacts when her husband informs her of his predicament, and Simon gets out of the scrape, are essential points in the plot.

We heartily recommend this play.
