there are two classes of criminals: those who are such because of mental, emotional, or psychological treatment. In the second, the offender, for the second force of offender, he will probably exist as long as our economic system and the methods by which his activity is to make it distinctly unprofitable for him. This can be done by decreasing greatly the probability, now far too small, of escape, capture, and conviction and a trial for guilty. Few criminals would take the risk of breaking the law if experience proved that the punishment followed by a conviction was long enough to warrant the risk. However, before we can achieve such con- -trols, we must recognize that crime is a mass phenomena and clean up our courts. Perhaps a Federal police system to replace the state and local systems will be the only solution.

INTRODUCTION TO VOLUME LIV

SINCe this issue marks the first effort of the new Managing Board, we present it, as customary, the traditions and policies will try to maintain. As in the past, the news columns will contain, as completely as possible, all information of interest to Technology students. Realizing that we are in many cases the only outlet for U. S. R. has neglected its activities, we shall co-operate with them to the fullest extent in the course of the year to place this phase of Technology's role. In other features, graduate concerns on a clearly understood basis.

We shall try, in our editorial columns, to interpret and integrate the news to the same time admitting that student opinion is complex, irrational, and often contradictory on many issues, and that a true representation of student thought will be achieved only by our ability. As far as possible in such cases the editorial policy will be the voiced opinion of the editorial board.

The most prominent fault of college editors is a tendency to go to extremes, to illiberalism and intolerance. A student opinion is entitled to be heard and that we can do.
