CRIBBING

STANDARDS OF ETHICS

I n a recent, well justified tirade by one of the instructors in the Mechanical Engineering Department, the matter of cribbing was declared to be one of the most flagrant violations of university rules. The instructor has been known to point out that the practice is not only a violation of the standards of ethics but also a direct violation of the rules of the University. The instructor further stated that the practice of cribbing is a serious threat to the educational process and that it should be discouraged at all costs.

The practice of cribbing is defined as the unauthorized copying of someone else's work, usually in an exam or test situation. This practice is not only unfair to the students who are not cribbing but also to the students who are cribbing, as they are not being held accountable for their own work.

The University has strict policies against cribbing, and students who are caught cribbing can face severe consequences, including failing the course or being expelled from the University.

In conclusion, the practice of cribbing is a serious violation of the standards of ethics and should be discouraged at all costs. The University should continue to enforce its policies against cribbing to ensure a fair and just educational environment.
