line in which actual operating conditions could be reproduced.

In making this study, which was carried out by Professor Louis F. Woodruff, it was necessary to determine the form of the wave every seven miles along the transmission line. The recordings were made by a device called a cam had been used for the purpose, however, this was found to be a better method since the cam would have to be

ENGINEERING SOCIETY
LOSES MODEL GLIDER

Miniature Mahogany Monoplane

Wend tunnel Model of a projected hanging Glider is reported lost by the Managing Board of the Aeronautical Engineering Society.

The model, a carefully finished mahogany hightwing monoplane with a span of about thirty inches, was caught by a gust of wind and fallen, crushing the wings and ruining the model.
