MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

Volume LV
February 19, 1935
No. 5

 corrects the text

Page Two

NEWS AND EDITORIAL

YOUR LENSES:
Avoid Eye-Strain

VIEW FROM A Cigar Joint.

Drama and the Ballet

The Soviet Encourages

Richard Halliburton, in a recent defensive mood, has made a public charge that while attending a performance of the ballet in Moscow he was met by a group of workers who, it was claimed by Nijinsky, the greatest master of the art of dancing, that he had never known.

Although we feel sorry for the girl in his article, we are not sorry that this happens if it is for the betterment of her character. It has often been said that a proper appreciation of anything requires the ability to see it in its true context. We will not oppose this, but in the case of ballet, we will argue that the real context is the Soviet government, which has a vested interest in the arts. If the Peonle than of interference by the government should be curtailed.

THE SOVIET ENCOURAGES

The Institute Committee has made attempts to remedy this situation by allowing the candidates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candidates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to

remedy this situation by allowing the candi-

dates to present their work to the public at the Institute. This is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. The Institute Committee has finally been forced to accept the idea that the student body should be given a chance to vote for the candidates, and the electioneering at the polls, and any attempts to