New T. C. A. Blotters Given to 2500 Students

Handbooks Issued To More Men Than In The Past Years

Two hundred more handbooks were given out last year to enterprising freshmen and transfer students than were issued in 1934.

These books have been given out since they were first made out in 1895. They are revised and relettered also to suit the 171 men whose names are given in the volume.

New Blotters Also Given

The 14th blotter since 1922 is now being distributed to the graduate and senior groups. As many as 1000 may receive these blotters.

Committee can receive these blotters. The committee also issue thousands of blotters to other organizations.

Two thousand five hundred will be issued now and 2000 will be issued in February.

The graduate house blotters are made in crimson.

Oath Bill

Despite the protests of leading Massachusetts educators, including Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, President of the University, the government of Massachusetts has seen fit to pass a bill requiring teachers to take an oath of allegiance to the constitution of the United States and of Massachusetts. Although this line of legislation is as logical, unwise, and short-sighted as only free-thinking professors of all open-minded persons, Dr. Marsh, along with other members of the University faculty, will take the oath.

Ironically, no one states that they will respect the oath.

Lamentably, however, is the fashion in which the state government has taken this measure to safeguard loyalty. The new law reinstates an oath that the bill will prove futile. As a state attempt to catch those who would teach precepts opposed to our views, the bill will prove useless, because those dissident to the Constitution will not respect the oath. They will take the oath willingly, knowing that they will be exiled in the face of a promise to something in which they do not believe. If the legislature knows this, then there is no fault to be found with the Oath Bill.

Perhaps in its next session the legislature will pass a bill requiring every citizen to take the same oath. Perhaps wise to do so, they will realize the circle in which they have been traveling in their attempts to maintain good government. Perhaps that the legislature will with good-construction bills to no end of need, but need no more of them.

A National Lottery

The bill of taking chances is inherent in man. Some people delight in gambling, the harsher term for this is by far the largest, since nearly every person in the United States is dumber to be included therein at some part of his life.

Therefore it can be readily seen that gambling is one of the best of chance-taking, an industry which probably surpasses the half billions in dollar mark every year. Although it is not legal, in most of the United States, gambling does attract millions of dollars every year, although the amount of it is that the majority of Farms come together to win. "I am certain," said a friend of mine, "that the world is made of copper.

In the meantime, State Blotter was busy with her needle, putting the last frills and furbelows on this country and the true picture of every person.

It started one Saturday night

There's no talking—Saturday was an exciting day for Aman Hunter. (You know him—the nice young fellow with the pink check.) That night he had a date with a girl. THE date with THE girl.

So he spent part of the afternoon shining up the old bus with "Ducol" Polish. By supper time it was new-looking and handsome enough for a king.

In the meantime Sasic Blossom was busy with her needle, putting the last frills and furbelows on her new, pink-colored Du Pont Rayon dress.

Sasic was pretty sure that Aman was THE boy. And at eight o'clock sharp, Aman and Sasic were on their way in the bright, shiny car... . . . bound for the movies to see a hand-holding romance that was made on Du Pont film.

Neither Aman nor Sasic realized how chemical research had touched their lives that day. The shiny car, the rayon dress, and the movie film—all resulted from the work of chemists. As a matter of fact, no day passes that modern chemistry doesn't help make life happier and more complete for them—and for you.

Commuters Will Hold Free Informal Dance

Members of the Commuters' Association, the 0.15 Club, will gather for the first time this year next Saturday evening, October 19, when the club will hold a free dance in the Walker Memorial Club Room.

Music will be furnished by the best dance orchestra in the country with the latest tunes being played by the Victrola and radio. The dance will be similar to those held last year in the room under the supervision of the Committee. When lighting will be accomplished by replacing the desk lights with red and blue balls.

Other plans suggested by the officers at their meeting last Friday evening include a get-acquainted evening for the near future and a large dance in the Main Hall of Walker Memorial Thanksgiving evening. It is planned to have this latter dance free to members also.
