George L. Thompson, Graduate Student, Wins Prize, Draws Shop Plan

George L. Thompson, a graduate architectural student at Technology, was awarded the Boston Society of Architects prize in the annual competition held on Tuesday, January 25th, for his drawing on the subject "A Shop for the Display and Sale of Fine Glassware".

The Committee on Education of the Society, in conjunction with the teachers of design of Harvard and Technology, selected Thompson's drawing from sixty-four submitted and exhibited. The prize, which amounts to one hundred dollars, constitutes one of the major interests of the architectural year. Its award to an H.T. student is particularly welcome at this time, since Harvard has won it for the past few years.

Third place in the competition for first medal awards was won by Robert L. Vose, N.C.S. Second medal awards were given to the following nine Technology students: T. C. Chang, G. W. Irvine, M. L. Lykes, Robert W. Vahlberg, John G. Mcleod, Albert W. Vahlberg, John H. M. Vahlberg, John H. M. Vahlberg, and Edwin B. Wooten, Jr.

The ceremony was followed by a tea. There was also an address by the President of the Boston Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy. The Daughters of the Confederacy are particularly those from the South, because of the possibility that the route to Rowe's Wharf may prove observing, and the following two cones are offered to help cheer up the difficulty. (1) Take the Dudley Street curb to Memorial Drive and Massachusetts Avenue to Massachusetts Station. Transfer to Subway car going east, change at Park Street to Subway for South Station. Obtain an exchange at South Station and board the Rowe's Wharf Elevated, which will leave at Rowe's Wharf. (2) Board the Harvard Square Subway south at Kendall Square, and transfer at South Station as above noted. Either route may be traveled for one ten-cent fare.

There are many ways of reaching Rowe's Wharf in an automobile; one of the simplest is to go over the Longfellow Bridge, turn left around the traffic circle, follow along by the river-side past North Station and under the Elevated tracks along Atlantic Avenue to Rowe's Wharf. The wharf is located on the left-hand side of the street.

Announcement of scholarship and loan applications is made in the Bul-
